Pinocchio

But I feel sorry for Pinocchio cried little Sarah after Father had closed the book.
Why, it's a happy ending, isn't it?
No it isn't sobbed Sarah, Pinocchio was much more fun when he was still a puppet!

After Father had comforted his crying daughter he went downstairs and sat silently smoking his pipe for awhile.
When his tears finally came he opened the window and looked at the stars.

It's alright he yelled and the moon winked at him.

Chaos

in the chaos of life
it's easy and understandable our yearning for neatness & perfection well-behaved children
parroting parents
exactly replicated
cloned harlequins
unblemished mannequins
jerking puppets on a string in the white and virginal snow

snow is cold
virgins are boring

give me the beauty of imperfection keep your tranquillizers i want to live & hear the laughter in my soul
at the sight of a cross-eyed
cookie-crumbled
chocolate-smeared
snot-covered
child
